

303rd BG (H) Combat Mission No. 123

19 March 1944

Target: "Crossbow" Targets, Wizernes, France
(Pas de Calais area)

Crews Dispatched: 21 + 2 spares

Length of Mission: 4 hours, 25 minutes

Bomb Load: 12 x 500 lb (AN-64) RDX bombs

Bombing Altitude: 22,000 ft

Ammo Fired: 320 rounds

Colonel William L. Travis, Chief of Staff for the 41 CBW, flew as co-pilot with 1Lt. Fred F. Wilson in #42-97590 Virgin Mary, 359BS-O. His brother, General Robert F. Travis, flew the lead plane with Maj. Kirk R. Mitchell. Maj. E.R.T. Holmes and two Lieutenants from the 41 CBW were crewmen on The '8' Ball MK II with LtCol. William R. Calhoun and Maj. Glynn F. Shumake.

One of the spare aircraft, #41-24605 Knock-Out Dropper, 359BS-R (Lt. Edwards), turned back over the Wash and returned to base because the No. 2 engine failed. The other spare aircraft returned as ordered.

Twenty B-17s dropped 240 500-lb. AN64 RDX bombs on the primary target. It was difficult to locate it until a few seconds before "bombs away." Several crews reported seeing hits in the target area, generally to the right of the assigned point.

No enemy aircraft were seen. Flak was moderate to intense and accurate. There were no casualties. Four aircraft sustained major battle damage and thirteen, minor damage – all from anti-aircraft gunfire. Fighter support was reported as good.

In the target area there were 1/10 to 3/10 patchy cumulus clouds with 10/10 swelling cumulus tops at 10,000 feet, ten miles south of the target. At the target there were no clouds, but there was considerable ground haze, which made it difficult to pick out the target. On the bomb run there was considerable glare from the reflection of the sinking sun on the haze. The bombardier could not keep the target in sight during the whole bomb run and was only able to pick it up again a few seconds before "bombs away."

General Travis reported, "We were under attack from enemy ground installations all the way from the coast to the target and out again. There was a terrific haze all over the ground which hampered the bombardiers' view of the target itself. None of us can be too sure of the results. Fighter cover was excellent and some of the crew reported that our fighters engaged the enemy to a small extent. They reported a ship blown up in the vicinity, but none were sure whether it was a fighter or a bomber. Those boys firing the ground guns were definitely not amateurs, as is proven by the several holes in our own plane." Maj. Mitchell, flying his 29th mission, had comments nearly identical to those of Gen. Travis.
